The Time for Heroic Measures Are at Hand

When the tongue of trade is cooled, when the eyes and thumbs of the clerk, are dull and languid, when the rating lever tangles the empty coils of the till, when the spider roots in the empty cash-box, and the tongue of the clerk is dry, the time for heroic measures is at hand. The time for heroic measures is at hand. The time for heroic measures is at hand.

Farewell Surprise Tendered the Brocks

Last Friday evening, the 25th, a merry crowd numbering 101 gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Brock, a few miles west of this city, and gave them a complete surprise. And no wonder. They came sweeping down on them when the Brocks were busy with their evening chores, and helped by way of supper. And a supper it surely was. All the chickens, pies and cake, and all that goes to make a feast for a king was surely to be found on that table, and every one seemed to have a good appetite, and there was enough and to spare.

Mr. Brock will move next week on the farm he bought in the south part of the county, the place on which he spent his boyhood days. The Brocks have lived on the Dave Hellwarth farm for ten years, and the great outpouring of neighbors and friends on the eve of their departure was a tribute to their worth that must have been pleasing to those in whose honor they gathered.

Ordinance Extending Buckeye Street South and Warren East Makes Two Crossings

For Park Entrance, Where Blasted Corporation Would Have None Grow.

Council met in regular session last Tuesday night with all members present but Lennartz and Winkeljohn, Mayor Kenney presiding.

Following the usual opening routine the streets committee reported favorably on granting Model Milling Co. the right to lay switch across West Warren street, and council granted such privilege on condition that the company properly set in all crossings, sewers, etc.

Beidersdorf, of the building committee, stated that they had notified Manager Wagner that he must fix the ceiling in the council chamber, but he had so far refused.

Ordinance appropriating property across Lake Erie & Western right-of-way at Warren and Buckeye streets for street purposes, was placed upon its second reading, but owing to the absence of two councilmen its final passage had to be deferred, council adjourning until the next evening for this purpose.

Wednesday night Mayor Kenney called the adjourned session together at half past seven with all councilmen present. The ordinance above referred to was at once placed upon its third reading and passed.

Councilman Meyer spoke about donating use of opera house to local G. A. R. Post for home talent show to be given by the veterans on March 12. A motion to give them the hall free of charge was passed, even the HOME EXHIBITION (?) trio—LeBlond, Beidersdorf and Meyer—voting aye.

J. R. Thaman, of the Celina Creamery Co., asked for some action in regard to the fixing up of the street running to his plant. Matter was referred to the streets committee.

Mr. Thaman also asked for some relief from the continued practice of the Lake Erie & Western freight train men in holding crossings. He was told to get the officers of the railroad, a job the mayor himself acknowledged was almost impossible of fulfillment.

The street sprinkling applications of G. E. Chivington and W. H. Dibble were then dug from the files for another whirl and the date was set into next session. After an hour of unsuccessful wrangling they returned to the council chamber undecided. Councilman Lennartz then suggested that the two gentlemen present bids for extra sprinkling and in this way Dibble secured the job, he bid being two dollars less than Chivington's.

Wonder of Blood Transfusion. There is nothing more dramatic in surgery than a transfusion of blood—to see the patient take on the rosy hue of health, waken out of his lethargy, show an immediate live interest in his surroundings and actually recover under the eye of the operator.

In adults we must not permit the amount transfused to equal the normal for fear of suddenly overtaxing the heart, but in the case of young children who have had severe hemorrhages there may be a complete recovery without a period of convalescence, so that at the termination of the operation the patient is well—from Dr. Howard Lillenthal's Current Progress in Surgery in the Century.

Remarkable cures are being made at the Sanitarium conducted by Dr. P. P. Duket, Lima avenue, Findlay, Ohio. Persons suffering with consumption of the lungs have been sent away in good health. Many homes throughout the state have been made happy by restoration to health of those nearest and dearest.

The medical profession is greatly interested in the many cures that have been recorded, and people from various sections come to Findlay to receive this wonderful treatment which is accomplishing such remarkable results.

The treatment is an antiseptic lymph injected interovenously and irrigates the lungs and gradually the diseased tissue is restored; the patient gains in weight and strength and in a few weeks is able to leave, having regained health and vigor.

Owing to the large number of people who desire to take the treatment, accommodations should be arranged for in advance.

Buttons in Parliament. Buttons have engaged the attention of British legislators even more frequently than hats. Five acts have been passed to protect the button industry of this country, and some of these are still unrecalled. An act of George I. inflicts a penalty of 40s. on any person using or selling "buttons made of cloth, serge, druggat, frieze, or camel." This law was a source of intense annoyance to foreign visitors, and the author of "Le Parliamen a Londres," a guide written in 1789, is careful to explain its provisions at considerable length. He adds, however, that foreigners "who are able to prove that their clothes were made in their own country escape the penalty when first summoned, on the understanding that they change their buttons within 24 hours."—London Chronicle.

Avoid Harsh Drugs. If you are subject to constipation, you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is harmful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way effect a cure and their tendency is to weaken the already weak organs with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever devised. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it on the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user a cent if it does not give entire satisfaction and complete remedy of constipation. This preparation is called Rexall Orderlies. These are perfect, soothing and most effective in action. They are made of a recent chemical discovery.

Their principal ingredient is odorless, tasteless and colorless. Combined with other well known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation, it forms a tablet which is eaten just like candy. They may be taken at any time, either day or night, without fear of their causing any inconvenience whatever. They do not grip, purge nor cause nausea. They act without causing any pain or excessive looseness of the bowels. They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons and aged people as well as for the most hearty person.

They come in two-size packages—12 tablets 10 cents, 36 tablets 25 cents. Remember you can obtain them only at our store—The Rexall Store—the Riley Drug Co., southeast corner Main and Market streets, Celina, O.

CUPID and CANINE VERSUS COUNT. By VANCE C. CRISS.

"I certainly am in a devil of a fix," remarked James Easley, better known as Jimmy, lounging in an easy chair in his bachelor apartments and addressing a building for want of a better confidant. "Think of a lover here in the twentieth century, anxious to wed the girl of his choice yet unable even to see her because an obdurate father has the dutiful daughter securely guarded in a country house. And what is worse, the announcement has been made of her engagement to some foreign fellow whose father happens to have had a title. Bess doesn't want to marry Count Bolenski and I don't blame her, but just how to prevent the match and assume the role of bridegroom myself, an arrangement mutually agreeable, is more than I can figure out just now."

Whopper, this being the name to which the canine answered, barked sympathetically and squared himself as if to show what he would do to the count if given an opportunity. Something in the pose of the dog suggested an idea to Easley. True, the thought was only in an embryonic state, but there was possibility of elaboration.

"I'll do it, Whopper, and you will have a chance to play the star part," announced Jimmy as he knocked the ashes from his pipe and prepared to leave the room.

Madge Whitworth and he always had been friends and it was to her he hurried that he might enlist her aid in perfecting and carrying out his scheme. From the time that the two were playmates in childhood they had looked to each other for assistance in tight places, and it was natural that he should go to her now for counsel in solving the most vital problem he had ever faced.

Intuitively, it seemed, the woman felt that something out of the ordinary had brought Easley to her house so early in the day, for it was hardly nine o'clock. Without waiting to complete her toilet she hurried into the reception room. She understood the situation and knew, with the wedding of Bess Armond to Count Bolenski set for no distant date, there was need of immediate action. Just what was to be done she did not know, but she would do her part, whatever it might be, and gladly, too.

For nearly an hour they sat on the big window seat and discussed Jimmy's scheme. Whatever the plan was, both young persons certainly regarded it as excellent, for frequently the silvery laugh of the girl and the bass of the man rang out together, fully attesting their confidence of ultimate success. And the interview had been so encouraging to Easley that he was smiling the old smile that had made him famous in college, when he left the house. Apparently the weight of recent worry was lifted from his mind.

Immediately after his departure Madge hurried to the telephone and called for the country home of Jonas Armond. Her request that she be permitted to speak with Miss Armond, who in truth was allowed little more liberty than the inmate of a jail, at first met with a flat refusal; but per severance had its reward and finally the fair prisoner's "hello" sounded over the wire. Madge cautioned Bess to say nothing that would indicate what was being told her, but to listen and remember. They talked for several minutes. Smiling at the surprise her message must have caused the girl at the other end of the line Madge finally hung up the receiver without waiting for a reply. Then started to her room.

"It will be hard on the count," was her spoken thought. "But Jimmy deserves that girl, and she loves him."

The following afternoon precisely at three o'clock a closed carriage was driven up the avenue of tall maples which led from the public road to the imposing home in the very center of Shady Grove, the Armonds' country estate. No sooner had the vehicle stopped than a woman, closely veiled, alighted and walked briskly up the broad steps as if bent on business of the utmost importance. Speaking rapidly to the butler who appeared at the door in response to her ring, she was shown into the hallway where a moment later, a maid reported to Miss Armond that the modiste for whom she had sent, desired to see her. Laughingly bewailing the fact that she was constantly at the mercy of those who designed her clothes, the young woman instructed the maid to bring the caller to her room immediately.
